

Einstein's Riddle

This is a variation of a riddle that is called 'Einstein's Riddle.' Few who try this riddle can solve it with out any help. Can you?

	House 1	House 2	House 3	House 4	House 5
Nation
House Color
Drink
Exercise
Pet

There are five houses. There are people of different nationalities living in each of the five houses. The houses are different colors. The people in each house drink a different drink, exercise in different ways, and keep different pets. Who keeps the fish?

Common Clues:

The Japanese woman drinks tea.

The green house is on the immediate left of the white house.

The owner of the yellow house plays tennis.

The person living in the house right in the middle drinks milk.

The person who has horses lives next door to the person who plays tennis.

The owner who surfs drinks beer.

The person who plays soccer has a neighbor who drinks water.

Group Clues:

As well as the common clues each member of your group will have two individual clues to memorize.

Individual Clues

The Korean man lives in a red house.
The Vietnamese grandmother keeps dogs as pets.

The Chinese couple lives in the first house.
The person who plays soccer lives next door to the house with cats.

The Indonesian teenager goes jogging.
The Chinese couple lives next to the blue house.

The green house owner drinks coffee.
The person who goes hiking has birds.